

The importance of English in careers

Original:

English is the universal language, known by almost all the human population. It is the first most spoken language in the world. I firmly believe it's important to have English as a secondary language, especially for our future careers because it's in the Science field. Most of the articles, books and research published are written in English so the majority of the audience can understand it. I have heard stories of people who have studied science and how knowing English has opened doors of opportunities in their careers. Not knowing English doesn't limit you completely in your career goals, however, having these skills gives you more opportunities to grow professionally and gain new experiences in places you have only dreamed of stepping foot on.

Here are the specified mistakes in your writing:

1. "English is the universal language" - Incorrect phrase. It should be "English is the language spoken universally."
2. "first most spoken language" - Redundant phrasing. It should be "most widely spoken language."
3. "in the Science field" - "Science" should be capitalized as it refers to a specific field of study.
4. "the majority of the audience can understand it" - Slightly awkward phrasing. It can be simplified to "the majority of the audience can understand."
5. "opened doors of opportunities" - Incorrect usage. It should be "opened doors of opportunity" or "created opportunities."
6. "Not knowing English doesn't limit you completely in your career goals" - Slightly awkward construction. It can be revised to "Not knowing English doesn't completely limit your career goals."
7. "in places you have only dreamed of stepping foot on" - Awkward phrasing. It can be simplified to "in places you have only dreamed of visiting."
